

Nimala's Poultry Business ...

M.G Nimala Gurukumari, a resident of Rabewa Wahamalgotlewa village and a driven entrepreneur. Through her small business, she has achieved success with the support of the UNDP and JSB project. Amidst the Covid-19 pandemic a few years ago, Nimala took the initiative to start poultry farming to meet the protein requirements of her household. Initially, she began with 10 chickens in a small coop built by her and her husband.

Her involvement in the JSB project from Japan marked a turning point in Nimala's poultry business. With the project's assistance, she expanded her flock to 200 chickens and significantly increased her income. What started to fulfill her family's egg needs has now evolved into breeding high-value chicks for the market.

Thanks to the UNDP and JSB project, Nimala now has access to many chicken coops, high-value chicks, modern breeding equipment, and a sufficient supply of quality eggs. This technical support has been instrumental in Nimala's journey towards becoming a successful entrepreneur.

Currently, Nimala earns approximately 35,000 rupees per month from egg sales and an additional 75,000 rupees per month from breeding and selling high-quality village chickens. This remarkable progress is a testament to her hard work and the support she received from the UNDP and JSB project.

Nimala expresses her gratitude towards the UNDP and JSB project for providing her with the resources and opportunities to thrive as an entrepreneur. With her sights set on conquering the business world, Nimala is determined to continue growing and expanding her venture.
