

Empowering Rural Entrepreneurs: The Inspiring Journey of Yamuna Sriyani

Yamuna Sriyani is a resident of the Kumaragama village in Hingurakgoda, who is also an ambitious entrepreneur. With the help of the UNDP and JSB project, she has achieved success through her small business. A few years ago, during a time of economic crisis, Yamuna took the initiative to start poultry farming to meet her family's protein requirements. To begin with, she started with 20 chickens in a small coop that she and her husband built.

Yamuna's poultry business saw a significant improvement when she got involved in the JSB project from Japan. With the project's assistance, she was able to expand her flock to 250 chickens and increase her income. Initially, she started raising chickens to meet her family's egg requirements, but now she has progressed to breeding high-value chicks for the market.

Thanks to the UNDP and JSB project, Yamuna now has access to many chicken coops, high-value chicks, modern breeding equipment, and a sufficient supply of quality eggs. This technical support has been essential in helping Yamuna become a successful entrepreneur.

Yamuna is currently earning around 20,000 LKR every month by selling eggs, and an additional 85,000 LKR per month by breeding and selling high-quality village chickens. This incredible achievement is a result of her hard work and the support she received from the UNDP and JSB project.

Yamuna is thankful to the UNDP and JSB project for offering her the necessary resources and opportunities to excel as an entrepreneur. With a strong determination to succeed in the business world, Yamuna aims to continue growing and expanding her business.
