

The rise of Subhashini: empowering women through poultry farming

Introduction

In the quiet village of Shanthipuram, Morawewa DSD, Trincomalee nestled amidst the dry zone of rural Sri Lanka, lives Subhashini, a woman of remarkable resilience and determination. Her journey from a humble laborer to a thriving entrepreneur is a testament to the transformative power of opportunity and perseverance.

Seizing opportunity

Subhashini's life took a significant turn when she became a beneficiary of the JSB project, generously funded by the Japanese government. Through this initiative, she received 20 chicks and a coop, provided with the aim of empowering women like her to become self-sufficient and economically independent. With the unwavering support of UNDP as the technical supporter and Janathakshan as the social mobilizer organization, Subhashini embarked on her journey towards entrepreneurship.

From hopes to reality

With determination in her heart and a vision for the future, Subhashini diligently nurtured her fledgling poultry farm. Despite the challenges she faced as a mother of two children, she persevered, tending to her chickens with care and dedication. Her efforts bore fruit as her poultry farm began to flourish, yielding an impressive 15 eggs per day, providing a steady source of income for her family. Not only were the eggs sold to customers, but they also served as a vital source of nutrition for Subhashini and her family members.

Empowering through entrepreneurship

Subhashini's entrepreneurial spirit did not stop there. Leveraging her newfound success, she began to explore avenues to expand her business further. Recognizing the demand for fresh, locally sourced eggs in her community, she decided to sell her produce, establishing herself as a reputable supplier in the village.

Community impact

Subhashini's thriving poultry farm not only transformed her own life but also had a ripple effect throughout her community. By employing local laborers for various tasks and sourcing supplies from nearby vendors, she contributed to the economic growth of Shanthipuram. Moreover, her success served as an inspiration to other women in the village, motivating them to pursue their entrepreneurial dreams.

Looking towards the future

Buoyed by her achievements, Subhashini remains steadfast in her determination to take her business to greater heights. With a steady income of 75 eggs per week and a growing customer base, she dreams of expanding her operations, investing in modern infrastructure, and implementing sustainable practices to ensure the long-term viability of her poultry farm.

Conclusion

Subhashini's journey from a laborer struggling to make ends meet to a successful entrepreneur is a testament to the power of opportunity, perseverance, and community support. Through the JSB project, backed by the Japanese government, and with the guidance of UNDP and Janathakshan, she has not only transformed her own life but also become a beacon of hope for women in her village. As she continues to chart new paths and overcome obstacles, Subhashini exemplifies the resilience and tenacity of women everywhere, proving that with determination and support, anything is possible.
